Hazrat Muhammad (PBUH) — Social Reforms

Fully solved exercises: comprehension, glossary, pronunciation, figurative language, context clues, idioms, vocabulary, oral and writing skills, MCQs

A. Reading Comprehension — Answer the following questions

1. What was the social condition of women, orphans and slaves in pre-Islamic Arabia?

Before the advent of Islam, Arabian society was tribal, patriarchal and deeply unequal. Power belonged to men, and the weak had no protection of law. The condition of the three groups was as follows:

(i) Women: They were deprived of their basic human rights. They had no share in inheritance, no right to own property and no say in their own marriage — they were often forced into it. They were treated as the property of men. In some tribes the cruelty went so far that newborn girls were buried alive.

(ii) Orphans: They were a subject of exploitation. They were left without care, love and protection, and the guardians often grabbed the property that their dead parents had left for them.

(iii) Slaves: Slavery was widespread. Slaves were considered subhuman and had no rights and no legal recognition. They could be bought and sold, were overworked, underfed and ill-treated, and their master could do with them whatever he wished.

In short, it was a society of injustice and cruelty, and it is exactly this society that Hazrat Muhammad (PBUH) reformed on the principles of human dignity, justice and mercy.

2. What are the three specific rights that Hazrat Muhammad (PBUH) introduced for women?

Hazrat Muhammad (PBUH) gave women legal rights which were unheard of in many societies of that time. The three main rights are:

(i) The right to own and inherit property: The Qur'an (Surah An-Nisa 4:7) says that for the female heirs also there is a share out of what the parents and near kindred leave behind, whether it is little or much. So a woman could now inherit from her father, husband and children and could own her own wealth.

(ii) The right to consent to marriage: No woman could be forced into marriage any more. The Rasoolullah (PBUH) made a woman's consent a necessary condition for a valid marriage, and her mehr and dowry became her own property, not her family's.

(iii) The right to education and knowledge: He (PBUH) encouraged the pursuit of knowledge for both men and women and said, “Seeking knowledge is obligatory upon every Muslim.”

The book also mentions a fourth right — fair treatment and maintenance in divorce (Qur'an 2:241). You may write it as an extra point if the question carries more marks.

3. What role did the Qur'an play in guiding the Rasoolullah's (PBUH) social reforms? Provide two examples.

The Qur'an was the foundation, the guide and the final authority of every reform of the Rasoolullah (PBUH). His reforms were not personal opinions or the customs of a tribe; they were based on Divine revelation. The Qur'an first exposed the injustice of the old society, then gave a clear law to replace it, and then made the people responsible for following that law. Because the command came from Allah, the reforms could not be challenged by any chief or tribe — this is why the changes lasted.

Example 1 (women's inheritance): The Qur'an (4:7) declared, “For the male heirs is a share out of what parents and near kindred leave behind, and for the female heirs is a share of what parents and near kindred leave behind.” On the strength of this verse, women who had no share at all became legal inheritors.

Example 2 (equality of all human beings): The Qur'an (49:13) says that all mankind is created from a single male and female and that the noblest among them in Allah's sight is the one best in piety. This verse destroyed the pride of race, tribe and social rank and became the base of the reforms for slaves and for the weak.

Other clear examples: Qur'an 4:6 orders that orphans be tested and their property handed over to them with witnesses; Qur'an 4:10 warns that those who consume an orphan's property wrongfully eat fire into their bellies; and Qur'an 90:13–18 declares the freeing of a slave to be a great act of virtue.

4. How did Hazrat Muhammad (PBUH) promote the emancipation of slaves?

Slavery was deeply rooted in Arabia and in the whole world, so Islam did not end it in one stroke — that would have ruined the economy and left thousands of people with no food or shelter. Instead, the Rasoolullah (PBUH) attacked the very foundation of slavery step by step:

(i) Freeing slaves was made a great virtue: The Qur'an (90:13) begins the list of good deeds with “the freeing of a bondsman”, and freeing a slave was also accepted as an expiation for several sins. People therefore began to free slaves to win reward from Allah.

(ii) He freed his own slaves: The Rasoolullah (PBUH) freed many of his own slaves, such as Hazrat Zaid ibn Harithah, and encouraged his companions to do the same. He also allowed a slave woman who bore a child to her master to become free after his death, and honoured the promise of freedom given by a master.

(iii) Money was spent to buy freedom: Zakat and sadaqat were allowed to be spent for the freeing of slaves (ar-riqab), so that the community itself paid for their liberty.

(iv) A legal way to freedom was opened: A slave could make a written contract (mukataba) with his master, earn and pay a fixed amount, and become a free person.

(v) Slaves were raised to honour and leadership: Hazrat Bilal ibn Rabah, a former slave, became the muazzin of the Rasoolullah (PBUH) and a prominent sahabi. His life proved that in Islam no one is low by birth.

studysapiens.com

These steps slowly killed the roots of slavery and established the principle of human dignity and equality.

5. What steps did the Rasoolullah (PBUH) take to ensure the humane treatment of slaves?

(i) He declared them brothers: He (PBUH) said, “Your slaves are your brothers.” This one sentence changed the whole relationship of master and slave into a relationship of respect.

(ii) Food and clothing were made equal: “Feed them with what you eat and clothe them as you clothe yourselves” (Sahih Muslim). A master could not eat better food or wear better clothes than his slave.

(iii) Mistreatment was strictly forbidden: Slaves were given legal protection and any cruelty to them was declared a crime, not a private matter.

(iv) A right to buy freedom was granted: Every slave had the legal right to earn his freedom through the contract of mukataba.

(v) Their dignity of language was protected: Owners were stopped from calling them insulting names; they were to be called by respectful words, because a name also gives a man honour.

Hadith support: the Rasoolullah (PBUH) said that one should feed the servant from what one eats, clothe him from what one wears, and not burden him with a task beyond his strength; if a hard task is given, the master must help him in it.

6. What values in the Rasoolullah's (PBUH) reforms are still relevant to modern societies addressing social justice issues?

The reforms of the Rasoolullah (PBUH) were not meant for the 7th century only; they are a complete charter of social justice and are fully relevant today. The main values are:

(i) Human dignity and equality: The Last Sermon declares that an Arab has no superiority over a non-Arab, nor a white over a black, except by piety and good action. This is exactly the message that modern societies need in order to fight racism, casteism and colour prejudice.

(ii) Justice and the rule of law: Every right was given by law and not by favour, so the weak could claim it in a court. Today's demand for an independent and equal justice system is the same principle.

(iii) Protection of the weak: Women, orphans and slaves of that age are the women, children, labourers, servants and other weak groups of our age. Laws against domestic violence, child labour and bonded labour carry forward the same spirit.

(iv) Accountability of guardians and officials: The Qur'an held guardians of orphans accountable for the wealth they managed. This is the base of the modern idea of transparency and audit of public money.

(v) Compassion, mercy and brotherhood: Feeding the hungry, freeing the enslaved and caring for the orphan are today's social welfare programmes and charity work.

studysapiens.com

(vi) Gradual and practical reform: He (PBUH) changed society step by step instead of breaking it, which teaches modern reformers that lasting change needs wisdom and patience.

(vii) Education for all: "Seeking knowledge is obligatory upon every Muslim" is the strongest early statement of free and equal education, and it guides the fight against illiteracy today.

C. Pronunciation, Pitch and Voice Variation

1. Define pronunciation, pitch and voice variation.

Term	Definition (easy wording)
Pronunciation	The way in which a word or sound is spoken. It means saying every sound — vowels and consonants — correctly and putting the stress on the right syllable of the word.
Pitch	The highness or lowness of a sound, decided by the frequency of sound waves. In speech it is the rise and fall of the voice, and it shows emotions and meanings.
Voice Variation	Changes in pitch, volume and rate (speed) of speech to express different emotions, meanings and emphasis.

2. Difference between a fictional and a nonfictional text while reading aloud.

Point	Fictional text	Nonfictional text
Example	A story, a narrative or a scene from a play	An informational article, a report or a news piece
Tone	Emotional, dramatic and full of feeling	Neutral, informative and clear
Pitch	Changes a lot — high pitch for excitement, low pitch for sadness or suspense	Moderate and steady; rises only to stress an important point
Voice variation	Different voices for different characters and sudden changes of mood	One clear, controlled voice with small changes for emphasis
Pronunciation	Clear and expressive, with dramatic pauses	Precise, correct and easy to follow

Model introduction of two texts (as asked in the exercise)

My fictional text: I have chosen the story “The Happy Prince” by Oscar Wilde. It is fiction, because the characters and events are imaginary and the writer wants to touch our feelings. I will read the dialogue of the swallow in a soft, sad voice and the happy, excited sentences in a higher pitch.

My nonfictional text: I have chosen a newspaper report on the cleaning of the River Ravi. It is non-fiction, because it gives real facts, dates and figures and its purpose is to inform, not to entertain. I will read it in a neutral, clear voice and raise my pitch only on the important figures.

In the reading practice, the reader must check three things: correct pronunciation of every word, pitch that matches the mood of the text, and voice variation that fits the character (fiction) or adds emphasis (non-fiction).

D. Writing Skills — A Short Story on “Kindness”

Kindness

One cold December morning, twelve-year-old Hamza was hurrying to school. Near the bus stop he saw an old man, wrapped only in a thin shawl, trying to lift a heavy sack of potatoes. Buses passed, people passed, but nobody stopped. Hamza also hesitated — he was already late.

“I will help you, uncle,” he said quietly.

The old man looked up, surprised. “Beta, you will miss your bus.”

“There is another one,” Hamza smiled, and lifted one side of the sack. Slowly, step by step, they carried it to the shop. Then Hamza noticed that the old man's hands were shaking; he had not eaten since the previous night. Hamza opened his lunch box and held out his two chapattis.

“This is all I have,” he said simply. “Please take it.”

The old man's eyes filled with tears. “People walk past me every day, but nobody sees me. Today, you saw me.”

When Hamza finally reached school, he was late and afraid. But the watchman, who had watched him help the old man from across the road, opened the gate softly and said, “Go in, beta. Allah sees.” That evening his mother hugged him and said, “Kindness is never wasted. It always comes back.”

Years later, Hamza became a doctor. Every Friday he treats poor patients free of charge, because he never forgot the old man's words: “Today, you saw me.”

Techniques applied in this story

Pronunciation: difficult words such as “hessitated”, “quietly” and “patients” are used carefully and read clearly. Pitch: the narrator's voice stays low and calm, rises in “There is another one!” and falls in the old man's last sentence to show emotion. Voice variation: three voices — the narrator, the weak old man and the cheerful boy — each with its own tone and speed. Pauses: short dramatic pauses before “Today, you saw me” and before the last line. Figures of speech: “cold December morning” (imagery), “Kindness is never wasted. It always comes back” (personification of kindness), “step by step” (alliteration).

E. Figurative Language

1. Definitions with examples

Simile	Comparison of two unlike things using “like” or “as”	He is as brave as a lion.
Metaphor	Direct comparison without “like” or “as”	Time is a thief that steals our moments.
Personification	Giving human qualities to a non-human thing	The wind whispered through the trees.
Hyperbole	Exaggeration used for emphasis or effect	I have told you a million times!
Onomatopoeia	A word that imitates a sound	The piece of meat sizzled on the pan.
Alliteration	Repetition of the same consonant sound at the beginning of words	Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers.
Idiom	A phrase whose meaning is different from its literal words	It is raining cats and dogs.
Oxymoron	Two contradictory terms used together	Deafening silence filled the room.

2. Fill in the blanks with appropriate figures of speech (solved)

No	Figure of speech	Word(s) from the passage	Why
1	Personification	the old house groaned in protest	A house cannot groan; a human quality is given to it.
2	Simile	howling like a hungry wolf	It compares the wind to a wolf using “like”.
3	Metaphor	his courage had turned to stone	Courage is compared directly to stone (hard, dead, unmoving).
4	Onomatopoeia	Crash!	The word imitates the sound of the window.
5	Hyperbole	This storm is going to bury us alive!	A clear exaggeration to show extreme fear.
6	Oxymoron	the bitter sweetness of nostalgia	Two opposite ideas, bitter and sweet, joined together.

No	Figure of speech	Word(s) from the passage	Why
7	Idiom	I'm really in over my head now	The meaning is not literal; it means involved in something too difficult.
8	Alliteration	silently slipping sideways	The same “s” sound is repeated.

3. The completed passage

“The old house groaned in protest as the storm rolled in, each gust of wind howling like a hungry wolf. Inside, Aslam sat frozen, convinced that his courage had turned to stone. Crash! went the window as the shutters slammed open, making his heart leap. “This storm is going to bury us alive!” he cried. The bitter sweetness of nostalgia crept over him as he remembered summers here. “Why did I come back?” he asked aloud. “I'm really in over my head now.” Still, he tried to steady himself, silently slipping sideways to the door, hoping to escape before the storm made the house its next victim.”

F. Context Clues

Context clues are the hints which the words and sentences around an unfamiliar word give us. With these hints we can guess the meaning of the word without a dictionary, and later check it in a dictionary.

1. What does the word “pummel” most likely mean in the paragraph?

Pummel means to hit or strike something again and again with great force — to beat or batter it.

2. What clues in the paragraph help you to figure it out?

Clue from the passage	What it tells us
“with tremendous force”	The action is very strong, so it must be hitting.
“the waves began to pummel the shore”	Waves strike the shore; pummel must mean strike.
“the wind howled, and trees bent”	The whole scene shows violent, forceful weather.
“boats rocked violently”	Violence of movement supports a meaning of heavy beating.
“not just a light drizzle — much more powerful”	The contrast with “light” shows great power and force.

Step: first read the whole sentence, then note the strong words near the difficult word, then guess, then confirm with a dictionary.

G. Exploring Idioms and Proverbs

Term	Definition
Idiom	A phrase or expression whose meaning is different from the literal meaning of its individual words.
Proverb	A short, common saying that expresses a truth, a piece of advice or wisdom based on experience.

Common idioms and proverbs with meanings

Idiom / Proverb	Meaning
Break the ice	to start a conversation in a relaxed way
Don't judge a book by its cover	do not make assumptions based on appearance
The ball is in your court	it is your decision or responsibility now
Actions speak louder than words	what you do is more important than what you say
Bite off more than you can chew	to take on too much responsibility

Exercise: the paragraph about Hina

1. What is the idiom in the paragraph? What does it mean?

The idiom is "kept her cool". It means that Hina stayed calm and did not lose control of herself even when she made a mistake on the stage. She did not panic, took a deep breath and finished her performance strongly.

Two more idioms are hidden in the same paragraph: "backed out" (decided not to do something you had promised to do) and "go for it" (to try something bravely).

2. What is the proverb? What lesson does it teach?

The proverb is "Nothing ventured, nothing gained". It teaches that we cannot get any success or benefit in life until we are ready to take a risk and try. If Hina had backed out of the talent show, she would have gained nothing; because she faced her fear, she felt proud at the end. So the lesson is: fear should not stop us from trying, because courage is the first step to success.

H. Vocabulary — Meanings of Unknown Words

Three strategies for finding the meaning of a difficult word: (i) word parts — prefix, suffix and root; (ii) dictionary or thesaurus to see the usage; (iii) multiple meanings — the same word can mean different things in different sentences, so choose the meaning that fits the sentence.

Five unknown words of Unit 1 with meanings

studysapiens.com

No	Word	Meaning	Strategy used
1	patriarchal	a social system in which men hold the main power and dominate	Word parts: patri (father) + archy (rule)
2	emancipation	the act of setting someone free from restrictions, especially from slavery	Word parts: e (out) + mancip (hand) + ation; also dictionary
3	oppressed	treated cruelly and unfairly by those in power	Context: the text pairs it with women, orphans and slaves
4	entrenched	firmly fixed and very difficult to change	Dictionary, then checked in the sentence about slavery
5	piety	sincere devotion to Allah and good character	Context of Qur'an 49:13, where it is the basis of honour

I. Oral Communication Skills — Giving Arguments and Opinions

To respond to a text with arguments and opinions, follow these four steps: (1) Read the text carefully and underline the main points and the tone; (2) identify the key idea and write its summary in two or three sentences; (3) form your opinion — agree or disagree, and say why; (4) support your opinion with three to five clear and logical reasons from knowledge, examples or personal experience.

Model oral presentation on "Social Justice" (2–3 minutes)

Respected teacher and dear class-fellows, my topic is social justice. In my opinion, social justice means that every person — rich or poor, man or woman, strong or weak — gets the same rights, the same respect and the same protection of law.

I support my opinion with three reasons. First, justice is the base of peace. A society where the weak are crushed by the strong always ends in anger and crime. Second, our religion has given us a complete model of social justice: the Rasoolullah (PBUH) gave inheritance to women, protected orphans and freed slaves, and his Last Sermon declared that no Arab is superior to a non-Arab. Third, justice is useful for the country itself. When a poor boy gets free education and a poor patient gets free treatment, the nation gains a doctor or an engineer.

Some people argue that social justice is only the duty of the government and that one person can do nothing. I do not accept this. A government builds schools, but only we can stop teasing a poor class-fellow; laws can punish cruelty, but only we can treat a servant as a brother. Small daily fairness from every one of us is what makes a just society.

So I conclude that social justice is not a slogan; it is a habit. If every student becomes fair in the classroom today, our country will be just tomorrow. Thank you.

Model speech on “The Qualities of a Great Leader”

Respected teacher and dear friends, a great leader is not a person who orders others; he is a person whom others willingly follow. In my view, the first quality of a great leader is honesty, because a leader who lies is trusted by nobody. The second is justice: he treats the rich and the poor equally. The third is courage: he takes the hard decision and takes responsibility for it. The fourth is kindness: he feels the pain of the weakest person of his nation. The fifth is foresight: he plans for tomorrow, not only for today. Our Rasoolullah (PBUH) had all these qualities, and that is why a nation of shepherds became a great civilization in a few years. If we practise honesty, justice and kindness in our own small duties, every one of us can be a leader in his own place. Thank you.

J. Editing and Proofreading

Editing means improving the content, structure and clarity of a piece of writing — fixing sentence structure, improving word choice, reorganizing ideas and making the writing clearer and more effective. Proofreading is the final step, in which small errors of spelling, punctuation, capitalization and grammar are corrected.

1. Edit and proofread the given paragraph and write the corrected one.

Corrected paragraph:

Yesterday, my friend and I went to the park. We saw a group of kids playing soccer and decided to join them. It was really fun, and everyone was nice. After that, we walked to the ice cream shop, but it was closed. We were disappointed, but we still had a great time.

Error in the passage	Correction	Reason
yesterday	Yesterday	First word of a sentence takes a capital letter.
me and my friend	my friend and I	The subject pronoun “I” is used, and the other person is named first.
we seen	we saw	“Seen” needs have/has; the simple past of see is saw.
and decide	and decided	The whole event is in the past, so the past form is needed.
it was real fun	it was really fun	“Fun” is an adjective here, so it takes the adverb really.
after that we walk	After that, we walked	Capital letter after a full stop and past tense.
it were closed	it was closed	“It” is singular, so it takes was.
we was disapointed	we were disappointed	“We” takes were; spelling of disappointed.

K. Hyphens and the -ough Letter String

A hyphen (-) is a small dash used to join words or parts of words. It makes the meaning clear in compound words: hyphenated compound nouns (check-in, mother-in-law) and hyphenated compound adjectives (well-known author, full-time job).

Add hyphens where needed (solved)

Sentence	Correct form
My sister has a part time job.	My sister has a part-time job.
The check in desk is over there.	The check-in desk is over there.
He gave a well deserved speech.	He gave a well-deserved speech.
She's my mother in law.	She's my mother-in-law.

Words with -ough: the same spelling, different sounds

Word	Sound	Meaning
though	sounds like “oh”	even if; however tough	sounds like “uff”	strong and difficult to break through	sounds like “oo”	to pass from one side to another thought	sounds like “awt”	an idea
cough	sounds like “off”	a sudden noise from the throat
rough	sounds like “uff”	not smooth
enough	sounds like “uff”	as much as needed

Match the -ough word to its meaning (solved)

Word	Correct meaning
though	even if; however
cough	a sudden noise from the throat
rough	not smooth
enough	as much as needed
thought	an idea
through	to pass from one side to another

L. Writing a Paragraph Using the Process Approach

The process approach means planning the writing step by step before the final draft. Its five steps are: brainstorming (thinking of ideas), mind-mapping (drawing the ideas in a visual way), structuring (putting them in a logical order), free writing (writing freely without worrying about mistakes) and note-taking (writing down the important facts and details).

Model plan on the topic "My Favourite Hobby — Gardening"

Step	Work done
1. Brainstorming	I love plants. • I water them daily. • My mother helps me. • It makes me calm. • I grow tomatoes and roses. • I want a big garden.
2. Mind-mapping	My Favourite Hobby → Gardening → What I grow (roses, tomatoes, mint) / When (evenings, holidays) / Why (relaxing, fresh vegetables, beauty) / Dream (a big green garden).
3. Structuring	Topic sentence: my favourite hobby is gardening. Supporting details: what I grow, when I do it, why I like it. Closing sentence: what makes it special.
4. Free writing	I like gardening very much. I grow roses and tomatoes in pots. I work in the evening. It makes me happy and calm.
5. Note-taking	Key points: hobby = gardening; plants = roses, tomatoes, mint; time = evening and holidays; reason = calm, fresh vegetables; dream = a big garden.

Final paragraph

My favourite hobby is gardening, because it keeps me close to nature and gives me peace of mind. In the small courtyard of our house I grow roses, tomatoes and mint in old paint buckets and clay pots. I water the plants every evening and clean the leaves on holidays, and my mother helps me with the seeds. It is hard work, but when the first bud opens, I forget all the tiredness. Gardening also gives us fresh vegetables and makes our home look beautiful. One day I hope to have a big green garden with a mango tree in the middle. For me, gardening is not just a hobby; it is my little piece of paradise.

N. Summary of the Unit

Hazrat Muhammad (PBUH) is the Last Rasool of Allah. In the 7th-century Arabia, society was tribal, patriarchal and unjust: women had no rights, orphans were exploited and slaves were treated as subhuman. On the guidance of the Qur'an, he

studysapiens.com

(PBUH) changed this society with reforms based on human dignity, justice and mercy. Women were given inheritance, the right of consent in marriage, education and fair treatment in divorce. Orphans were protected by law, their guardians were made accountable for their property and their care was declared a way to Paradise. Slavery was attacked at its roots: freeing slaves was made a great virtue, slaves were to be fed and clothed like their masters, they could buy their freedom, and they rose to honour and leadership, as Hazrat Bilal (RA) shows. The Last Sermon declared all human beings equal, with no superiority except in piety. These reforms were not only progressive for their own age; they remain a complete model of social justice for the world today.

Points to Remember

• Pre-Islamic Arabia: women had no inheritance or ownership, girls were buried alive, orphans were exploited, slaves were treated as subhuman.

• Three rights for women: (i) own and inherit property, (ii) consent to marriage, (iii) education — the book also gives fair treatment in divorce.

• Key references: 49:13 (equality), 4:7 (inheritance), 2:241 (divorce), 4:6 (orphans' property), 4:10 (fire for eating orphans' wealth), 76:8 (feeding the orphan), 90:13–18 (freeing a slave).

• Slave reforms: virtue of freeing slaves, equality ("your slaves are your brothers"), food and clothing equal to the master's, mukataba contract, Bilal ibn Rabah as muazzin.

• Last Sermon: no Arab is superior to a non-Arab, no white to a black, except by piety and good action.

• Figures of speech in the unit: simile, metaphor, personification, hyperbole, onomatopoeia, alliteration, idiom, oxymoron.

• -ough words: though (oh), tough/rough/enough (uff), through (oo), thought (awt), cough (off).

• Idiom test in the paragraph: "kept her cool"; proverb: "Nothing ventured, nothing gained".

• Editing = content and clarity; proofreading = spelling, punctuation, capitalization, grammar.
